

Iowa Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway

Information Guide

An adventure over 100
Years in the making!

Iowa's Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway

More than a century ago, travel by car in Iowa was dangerous and difficult. Roads were rarely improved and were a muddy mess in wet conditions. Getting stuck in the “gumbo” was common.

Established in 1913, the Lincoln Highway transformed automobile travel in the United States. As the first coast-to-coast improved highway, the Lincoln Highway demonstrated the power of good roads for transportation and commerce. Travel became a new kind of adventure: instead of a difficult journey, the highway provided travelers with a safer and easier way to explore the nation.

The Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway is Iowa's portion of this historic road. Your route is marked with modern byway signs and historic Lincoln Highway markers. Specially marked loops take you off the main byway and onto early Lincoln Highway routes for a historic and sometimes graveled side trip. Set off today on your own adventure on the Main Street across America!

What is a Byway?

The DOT designates a route as a State Byway on the basis of scenic and historic qualities, using an established criteria.

A Byway is made up of six intrinsic qualities: Archaeological, Cultural, Historic, Natural, Recreational, and Scenic. Use this Information Guide to find what interests you.

Favorite Places

We have compiled favorite or “sacred” spaces given to the Byway during community input meetings, followed by research. It is by no means a complete list of what to “see” and “do” along the Byway. Share what you find on your Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway adventure on our Facebook page.

There is something for everyone along the Lincoln Highway!

Generous funding for this brochure was provided by:

The History of the Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway

Carl Fisher, who also created the Indianapolis 500, was the idea man behind the Lincoln Highway. His vision for a “Coast-to-Coast Rock Highway”, running from Times Square to San Francisco, would, in his words, “stimulate as nothing else could the building of enduring highways everywhere that will not only be a credit to the American people, but that will also mean much to American agriculture and American commerce.”

Fisher and Henry B. Joy, the President of the Packard Car Company, as well as other auto enthusiasts and industry officials created the Lincoln Highway Association and laid out the most direct route using existing roads, dirt roads, and wagon trails. In Iowa, the route stretches from the Mississippi River in Clinton to the Missouri River in Council Bluffs. Towns along the way were honored to be designated a Lincoln Highway community and soon gas stations, repairs shops, restaurants, motels, and tourist camps developed to accommodate the traveler.

The Association felt local people should improve their own roads and to encourage this, a “Seedling Mile” was paved in each state. The Association felt, “One permanent mile established and built under proper specifications will lead to further connecting miles of the same standard.” In Iowa, the Seedling Mile was paved in 1918-1919 just outside of Cedar Rapids, between Mount Vernon and Marion. By 1928, the entire Iowa section was paved when Cedar County, the last county, was completed.

The road was named as a tribute to Abraham Lincoln prior to the building of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., as both Fisher and Joy admired Lincoln.

As roads were improved and new bridges built, the route has changed alignments. Today, the Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway signage directs the traveler on much of the original sections, but some loops are still graveled.

Archaeological Intrinsic Quality

The Office of the State Archaeologist has record of approximately 27,000 sites. Most people are unaware of the vast majority. Some are completely gone or badly disturbed by plowing, by erosion, or by roads & other development. Large rivers were the highways of prehistoric people. Archaeological sites are documented, but exact locations are not shared with the public in order to aid preservation.

FUN FACT:

There are 1,144 Byway signs marking the route of the Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway: 956 marking the main route and 188 marking loops. There are another 566 "auxiliary" signs, like directional arrows, along with these byway signs.

Cultural Intrinsic Quality

After the Blackhawk Wars, the land west of the Mississippi River opened up for settlement. Not only were there pockets of German & Czech towns, but a variety of religions with Quaker, Amish, & Mormon leaving their influences along what would become the Lincoln Highway. The Meskwaki Indian tribe also settled near the Iowa River in Tama County. Each brought celebrations, arts, foods, & their way of life.

C5 Tama County

Meskwaki Nation: The Black Hawk Wars ended in 1803 allowing settlers & the Meskwaki to enter Iowa. In treaties over the years, land & property was ceded away & in 1845, the Meskwaki were removed to Kansas. Some Tama County residents hid a few people from the authorities. Wishing to live in Iowa, 317 Meskwaki returned from Kansas causing the State of Iowa Legislature to ask Tama residents if they would allow the Meskwaki to stay. After a “yes” vote, the tribe bought 80 acres along the Iowa River. Today, they own 7,779 acres in Tama & Palo Alto County & are their own sovereign nation & settlement. They are the only Indian Tribe to live directly along the Lincoln Highway.

Czech Influence: Communities were built to north of Tama in the “Bohemian Alps.” The Czech influence is still very strong as local cafes, businesses, & social gatherings often serve their specialty- kolaches, a jelly-filled pastry, to visitors.

C10 Carroll County

Known for its Bootlegging History during Prohibition years. Around 1920, as a way to feed kids & save farms, Templeton residents crafted a bootlegged keg whisky that found its way to Chicago & into hands of Al Capone. Became his personal favorite, called the "Good Stuff." At least 30 Templeton-area family rye whisky recipes have been passed down. Over 400,000 motor vehicles were registered in Iowa and only 25 miles of paved roads outside of towns in the 1920's.

Historic Intrinsic Quality

The Lincoln Highway is best known for its place in history as the first improved transcontinental road. But, even before the Lincoln Highway inception, the area it would travel through the midsection of the state was full of histories of Indian tribes, early European settlers, and the building of railroads. When the Lincoln Highway was created, it tied communities of different backgrounds together and made a history of its own.

HI Clinton County

Towns of Lyons and Clinton were known as the “Lumber Capitol of the World” from 1850-1900. Huge log rafts floated down from WI/MN to be cut into lumber, then shipped by rail or by river. Clinton had more millionaires per capita than any other town in the nation. By 1900, northern forests were depleted and mills closed.

H13 Pottawattamie County

Lewis and Clark Expedition started in 1804 from St Louis, MO and traveled up the Missouri River to its source. While Lewis and Clark were in Pottawattamie County, Indians flocked to examine the boats and equipment. Frequent meetings (or “councils”) of expedition commanders and local Indians were held. One favorite meeting place became known as “Council Bluffs.”

Mormons, led by Brigham Young, came from Nauvoo, IL after Pottawattamie Indians left. Mormons named the county seat “Kanesville,” after a friend of the Mormons. The Mormon Trail through the area eventually led to Salt Lake City, Utah.

In 1849, Council Bluffs became a large Gold Rush outfitting port for those seeking to gain fortune in the West.

By 1853, Kanesville reverted back to Council Bluffs.

FUN FACT:

A dedicated motor enthusiast, President Woodrow Wilson, contributed $5 whereupon he was issued the first Lincoln Highway Certificate.

Natural Intrinsic Quality

Iowa was once under a warm sea near the equator. As land forms shifted and the Ice Age melted away, Iowa was created with varying topography. The major rivers, as well as many other smaller rivers and streams were used early on by people for travel or as a food source. Early settlers used streams to grow crops and turn wheels in mills. Much of Iowa was “swampy”, so tiles were laid to drain the land for farming. Today, many natural areas are preserved with native habitats for a variety of creatures. Some of these areas include recreational opportunities.

N8 Boone

The Monarch Migration Path runs in the spring through Boone and counties to the west. In the fall, monarchs travel from Wisconsin into eastern Iowa before heading to Mexico for the winter. Boone County is also in the flight pattern for spring and fall migration for the American White Pelican. Their path is along the Des Moines River Valley to Des Moines, then south through either St. Louis or Kansas City.

N10 Carroll

Arcadia

In 1867, the Chicago Northwestern Railroad entered Council Bluffs and established switch stations in Carroll County. One to the east, called Eastside (no longer exists) and on the west side, a town called Westside (still exists). In the middle, was Tip-Top. A wealthy New Englander traveling from CA to NY was impressed with the area and bought 4,000 acres, platted the town, and persuaded the railroad to rename it from Tip-Top to Arcadia.

The Missouri and Mississippi Divide, east of the town of Arcadia, in a roadside park, N side of Lincoln Highway. Large rock monument and DOT Historic Sign, 1429 ft above sea level. Rivers and streams on the east side flow southeasterly to the Mississippi River and those to the west flow southwesterly to the Missouri River. (42.0773914,-95.0290375)

After the last Ice Age and the last of the melted waters receded, strong winds picked up dust and deposited it to create the Loess Hills. Soil is called “sugar clay,” as it is very hard when dry, but by no cohesion when wet. Only Shaanxi, China has a larger deposit of loess soil.
