More than a century ago, travel by car in Iowa was dangerous and difficult. Roads were rarely improved and were a muddy mess in wet conditions. Getting stuck in the “gumbo” was common. Established in 1913, the Lincoln Highway transformed automobile travel in the United States. As the first coast-to-coast improved highway, the Lincoln Highway demonstrated the power of good roads for transportation and commerce. Travel became a new kind of adventure instead of a difficult journey. The highway provided travelers with a safer and easier way to explore the nation.

The Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway – A National Scenic Byway is Iowa’s portion of this historic road. Your route is marked with modern byway signs and historic Lincoln Highway markers. Specially marked loops take you off the main byway and onto early Lincoln Highway routes for a historic and sometimes graveled side trip. Set off today on your own adventure on the Main Street across America!

What is a Byway?
The Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway became a National Scenic Byway in 2021, meaning the byway has a high level of at least one of six significant qualities. Our byway’s focus is on the historic quality and now joins the Lincoln Highway in the states of Nebraska and Illinois as National Scenic Byways. This makes over 1,000 miles of continuous Lincoln Highway Byways with national designation.
Carl Fisher, who also created the Indianapolis 500, was the idea man behind the Lincoln Highway. His vision was for a “Coast-to-Coast Rock Highway,” running from Times Square to San Francisco.

“Stimulate as nothing else could, the building of enduring highways everywhere that will not only be a credit to the American people, but that will also mean much to American agriculture and American commerce.”

Carl Fisher

Fisher and Henry B. Joy, the President of the Packard Car Company, as well as other auto enthusiasts and industry officials created the Lincoln Highway Association (LHA) and laid out the most direct route using existing roads, dirt roads, and wagon trails. In Iowa, the route stretches from the Mississippi River in Clinton to the Missouri River in Council Bluffs. Towns along the way were honored to be designated a Lincoln Highway community and soon gas stations, repair shops, restaurants, motels, and tourist camps developed to accommodate the traveler. The LHA leadership felt local people should improve their own roads, and to encourage this a “Seedling Mile” was paved in each state. Iowa’s Seedling Mile was paved in 1918-1919 just outside of Cedar Rapids, between Mount Vernon and Marion, and is still there today. By 1928, most of Iowa was paved. Cedar County was the last county to pave rural areas of the Lincoln Highway. The road was named as a tribute to Abraham Lincoln prior to the building of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., as both Fisher and Joy admired Lincoln.

As roads were improved and new bridges built, the route has changed alignments. Today, the Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway signage directs the travelers on much of the original sections, but some loops are still graveled.
Remains of the Oneota culture (1299-1700AD) are still in Clinton County including a possible Native American burial ground found near the Clinton County Administration building. Construction work led to skeletons found in the 1960’s and 2010’s.

Calamus was named for the Calamus Creek which received its name for the sweet flag growing in it (botanical name Acorus Calamus), commonly called sweet flag or calamus. A location was sought for a post office at the crossroads of stage coach lines and Native American trails. Avoiding hazardous swamp conditions, the site for Calamus was chosen and platted in 1860.

As European settlers came west, many settled along the Mississippi River and became entrepreneurs. The towns of Lyons and Clinton were once known as the “Lumber Capitol of the World” (1850-1900). Huge log rafts floated down from Wisconsin and Minnesota to be cut into lumber, then shipped by rail or by river. Clinton at that time had more millionaires per capita than any other town in the nation. By 1900, northern forests were depleted and the mills closed. Lyons became part of the city of Clinton in 1895.

DeWitt was named to honor DeWitt Clinton, former governor of New York and the protector of the Erie Canal. This city was the first Clinton County seat, but because more citizens settled near the Mississippi the towns of Lyons and Clinton vied for the title. In 1869 a new courthouse was constructed in Clinton in just 23 days. It was replaced in 1878 and again in 1892.

Cedar County

Cedar County is named for the Cedar River that runs through it. It is the only Iowa county that shares the name of a tree. In an archaeological excavation in a Cedar County cornfield (Rummells-Maske site), a large cache of Clovis spear points were found in the mid-1960s. This type of point is the oldest found in North America from the Paleo-Indian time (12,000-10,000 years ago).

Clarence

Clarence is the smallest town in the Main Street Iowa program. Some of their community projects include bringing new business to the community, maintaining large planters with seasonal decorations, painting crosswalks in the Lincoln Highway logo colors of red, white, and blue, grouping colorfully painted vintage metal chairs as benches downtown, and adding a splash park to the main city park. Clarence is one of two towns left in Iowa where Highway 30 still follows the Lincoln Highway through the downtown.

Mechanicsville

A petition in 1867 merged the towns of Iroquois and Mechanicsville. The town was named Mechanicsville as most of the men were mechanics. Today the community uses the tagline “Heaven Amongst the Cedars” to describe this small Iowa town.

Alice Ramsey, the first woman to drive across the nation, in 1909 (prior to the Lincoln Highway) got stuck here in a torrential rainstorm. Stashing her car in a livery, she ran through the rain to a restaurant (now Bubba’s Bar and Sports Grill).

Stanwood

The city of Stanwood once boasted several gas stations on both the north and south sides of the Lincoln Highway. On the north of the Lincoln Highway, at the corner of Maple Street, was the 1920s dance hall Highway Gardens. A lunch room and bar were added to make it a year-round popular gathering spot.

Linn County

Linn County and the Cedar River have several archaeological finds such as pottery from the Early Woodland Period (500 BC to 99 BC) at Spring Hollow, groups of mounds from the Woodland Period inside the entrance of Palisades-Kepler State Park, fragments of pottery and triangular points from the late Prehistoric period (Oneota) near Pleasant Creek reservoir, and a single shred (fragment) of pottery found near Wickiup Hill Outdoor Learning Center.

Linn County has a strong roadside vegetation plan for county roads, making for scenic views of the changing of colors each season. The rolling hills were an inspiration for famed painter Grant Wood, the iconic American Gothic artist from nearby Anamosa. His art is not only in museums, but has been painted on the side of barns and buildings.
Large groups of Czechs and Slovaks immigrated to Cedar Rapids in the 1850’s and found steady work in the slaughterhouse and packing plant. Word got out in Europe and waves of new Bohemians arrived, settling between downtown and the plant. Later entire blocks of the Czech settlements were cleared to make way for a wholesale warehouse district. Today, this area is called “New Bo” and is home to restaurants, residents, and shopping.

MARION

Marion was platted as the Linn County seat in 1839 and became an important railroad hub in 1864. The first jail was built in 1840. The first prisoner was arrested for horse stealing and confined before the logs were laid higher than his shoulders. In 1919, the county seat was moved to an island on the Cedar River, inside Cedar Rapids, where it is today. Marion was platted as the Linn County seat in 1839 and became an important railroad hub in 1864.

Nearby vertical cliffs (palisades) were created by lime mud deposits with crinoids (sea lilies) debris and locally common coral. Through chemical changes due to weathering processes, some bedrock dissolved and created small caves and overhanging rock ledges. The city is built atop a Paha (erosional remnants of Pre-Illinoian glacial plain) preserved by thick windblown loess deposits.

Meskwaki Nation:
The Black Hawk Wars ended in 1803 allowing settlers and the Meskwaki to enter Iowa. In treaties over the years, Meskwaki land and property was ceded away. In 1845, the Meskwaki were removed to Kansas. Some Tama County residents hid a few people from the authorities. Wishing to live in Iowa, 317 Meskwaki returned from Kansas causing the State of Iowa to ask Tama residents if they would allow the Meskwaki to stay. After a “yes” vote, the tribe bought 80 acres along the Iowa River. Today they own 7,779 acres in Tama and Palo Alto County and are their own sovereign nation and settlement. They are the only Native American tribe to live directly along the Lincoln Highway.

The Iowa River is home to much wildlife. Notably, the American White Pelicans follow a path from southern Minnesota to Tama and the Iowa River, then fly west to the Missouri River before heading south through Nebraska and Kansas.

Quakers settled here in 1850. The largest Friends meeting in the world was held in Marshall County in 1860. This group is often known for their help with the underground railroad, of which Marshall County was no exception. Marshall County scenery, as in much of Iowa, includes geometrics of undulating waves of row crops. It is hard to imagine that 80% of Iowa was once covered by prairie.

Boone County, home to the Des Moines River Valley, the largest river in the interior of Iowa. A mammoth tusk from 8,000-12,000 years ago and arrowheads and stone tools from Archaic Period (5,000-10,000 years ago) are on display at the Boone Historical Center. Archaeological evidence from 4,000 years ago and Native American mounds have been found in Ledges State Park, near Madrid. A burial mound from the Woodland Period (500 BC to 1000 AD) was excavated in 1908, near the Kate Shelley High Bridge.
The Des Moines River Valley offers desired habitat to much wildlife. Notably, the Monarch Migration Path runs in the spring through Boone and counties to the west. In the fall, monarchs travel from Wisconsin into eastern Iowa before heading to Mexico for the winter. Boone County is also in the flight pattern for spring and fall migration for the American White Pelican. Their fall path is along the Des Moines River Valley to Des Moines, then south to either St. Louis or Kansas City.

Travelers of the Boone and Scenic Valley Railroad will cross the 156 ft. tall Bass Point Creek High Bridge and enjoy scenic views of the river valley and wildlife including deer, turkey, and eagles.

Boone County was named in honor of Nathan Boone, the youngest son of Daniel Boone. The city of Boone was first named “Montana” and changed its name in 1871 to Boone. In 1887, Boone merged with Boonesboro, the county seat 1 ½ miles to the west. Today, you will see two distinct downtowns, with the courthouse still in the western portion, and multi-story buildings showing economic growth due to the railroad in the eastern portion.

Boone, being a railroad town, saw its share of hobos riding the rails.

Native American mounds and artifacts have been found along the Raccoon River. Greene County’s land scores a 76.4 in the Corn Suitability Rating (suitability for the soil to grow row crops, ranging from 5 to 100). Greene County pays homage to its agricultural heritage with “barn quilts” painted on 20 barns across Greene County. The one-of-a-kind designs painted are attached to the upper section of the barn and are over 8 feet in size. Look for them as you drive.

Carroll County

A north and south Native American warpath divided Meskwaki/Pottawattamie tribes from the Sioux. Native American artifacts are housed in the Carroll County Museum. This area was known for its “bootlegging history” during the Prohibition years. Around 1920, as a way to feed kids and save farms, Templeton residents crafted a bootlegged keg whiskey that found its way to Chicago and into the hands of Al Capone. It soon became his personal favorite as he called it the “Good Stuff.” At least 30 Carroll County family rye recipes have been passed down. Area buildings had false floors as hiding places to store the “Good Stuff,” as did a headstone in the local cemetery.

ARCADIA

In 1867, the Chicago Northwestern Railroad entered Council Bluffs and established switch stations in Carroll County. One to the east of the elevation highpoint, called Eastside (no longer exists) and on the west side of the highpoint, Westside (still exists). The highpoint in the middle was called Tip-Top. A wealthy New Engander traveling from California to New York was impressed with the area and bought 4,000 acres, platted the town, and persuaded the railroad to rename it from Tip-Top to Arcadia. Arcadia is 1429 feet above sea level and the rivers and streams on the right side flow to the Mississippi River and those on the west side flow to the Missouri River.

Archaeological evidence proves tobacco was cultivated in the area in the late Woodland Period (500-1700 AD). Evidence of campfires and bones from meat eaten have also been found near the Boyer River. Crawford County has the northernmost point of the Lincoln Highway as it travels coast-to-coast.

DENISON

Denison was settled by European people from the East and Mormons traveling near the Missouri River. The Providence Western Land Company purchased 70,000 acres to sell to these new settlers. Denison was a 2-day stop for the 1919 Army Convoy as it traveled the Lincoln Highway, which included a young Lt. Col Dwight D. Eisenhower. This trip may have reaffirmed his idea for the interstate system to move men and equipment quickly across the nation.

Abraham Lincoln Land
Lincoln received land as payment for his services during the Black Hawk War, located 7 miles north and 2 miles east on a dirt road. (Caution if raining or road is wet.) In 1923, the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) placed a marker here.

After the last Ice Age and the last of the melted waters receded, strong winds picked up dust and deposited it to create the Loess Hills. Soil is called “sugar clay,” as it is very hard when dry, but no cohesion when wet. Only Shaanxi, China, has a larger deposit of loess soil in the world.

An excavation found bison were hunted and killed in large numbers in the area during the Archaic Period (10,000-5,000 years ago). Native American mounds have been found at several locations and hatchets, stone hammers, pottery, copper, tools, and cups found along an old Native American trail. Mormons, under Brigham Young, came through Harrison County in 1847 from Nauvoo, IL. Disagreements regarding polygamy led to some Mormons breaking from the wagon train and settling in the area, the rest traveling on to settle Salt Lake City in Utah.

The Lewis Central School site in Council Bluffs has evidence of communal graves from the Archaic Period (10,000–5,000 years ago.) Glenwood, a subculture of Late Woodland Period (900–1300 AD), shows they lived along the Loess Hills with earthen lodges, partial subterranean pits, and cache pits to store food.

Trails in the area were first created by ancient civilizations, then Native American tribes, followed by the Mormons. Some paths used later for automobiles as roads, such as the Lincoln Highway. Grapes, raspberries, gooseberries, strawberries, and crab apples grew wild in Pottawattamie County. The area soil in the Loess Hills has been found to nurture and sustain grape growing. This led to the Loess Hills AVA (American Viticulture Area) Wine Trail, approved in 2016.

COUNCIL BLUFFS

Lewis and Clark Expedition started in 1804 from St. Louis, MO, and traveled up the Missouri River to its source. While Lewis and Clark were in Pottawattamie County, Native Americans flocked to examine the boats and equipment. Frequent meetings or “councils” of expedition commanders and local Native Americans were held. Favorite meeting areas along the Missouri River bluffs became known as “Council Bluffs.”
Pottawattamie County

Mormons, led by Brigham Young, came from Nauvoo, IL, after Pottawattamie Native Americans left. Mormons named the county seat “Kanesville” after a friend of the Mormons. The Mormon Trail through the area eventually led to Salt Lake City, Utah. In 1849, Council Bluffs became a large Gold Rush outfitting port for those seeking to gain fortune in the West. By 1853, Kanesville reverted back to the name Council Bluffs.

The Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway – A National Scenic Byway is Iowa’s first Heritage Byway. It became a National Scenic Byway in 2021, the third national byway in the state. There are also 11 state byways, making a total of 14, all offering stunning views, recreation, history, and more across Iowa.

Prairie Rivers of Iowa, a not-for-profit 501(c)3 organization in Ames, IA, manages the Iowa portion of the byway, with a mission to promote economic development through the restoration and conservation of Iowa’s cultural and natural resources.

At over 460 miles, there’s always more to explore on the Lincoln Highway Heritage Byway – A National Scenic Byway! We invite you to join the Iowa Lincoln Highway Association to meet other supporters of this historic roadway. This group is dedicated to preserving and promoting the Lincoln Highway in Iowa and nationally.
